This is the first social activity of the year given by all the students and as it is for the benefit of the athletic association it deserves to receive the enthusiastic support of all. The girls of the D. S. department are pushing this with all their efforts to succeed in clearing a nice sum of money for the athletic association. About fifty pounds of candy will be made; also many things have been solicited. "Pa's Housekeeper," a farce, and "The Milkmaid," an operetta, will be the chief attractions. Besides these, several smaller shows will be staged, including the feature entertainments on the zone. The social success of this affair depends on the students; the financial success on the people of the city. Everyone is urged to attend the supper and stay for the entertainments. The students hope to make this the best fair ever given at the High school.

THE TEST THAT TELLS

Is the Test of Time, Many Stevens Point People Have Made This Test.

Years ago this Stevens Point citizen told in a public statement, the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the testimony complete. Instantly like this are numerous. They doubly prove the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills. Can any Stevens Point reader demand more convincing proof? It's Stevens Point testimony—it may be investigated.

Charles H. Curtis, 711 Church St., Stevens Point, Wis., says: "I suffered from pain in the small of my back and could hardly get around. It was all I could do to get out of bed and dress myself in the morning. I hardly knew what ailed me, but finally concluded that my kidneys were weak. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from Taylor Bros. drug store and they acted promptly in relieving me." (Statement given Sept. 1, 1908.)

Has Used Doan's Since.

Over four years later, Mr. Curtis said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills off and on since giving my former endorsement and have always found that they do their work satisfactorily. I have heard of others who have been greatly helped by them."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Curtis has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Distress in the Stomach.

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one dose of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Paulsen, Vector, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with cadache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the cadache and other annoyances ceased a short time." Obtainable everywhere.

THE ENGLISH CAPITAL

London's History Begins With the Coming of Roman Legions—Is City of Many Sides.

"London, first among the war capitals, and foremost among the battle theatres on English ground—by reason of its having become the storm center for the mighty Zeppelins—is sketched with all the intimate details of long friendship by Florence Craig Albright in a communication to the National Geographic Society. Speaking of the many-sidedness, the great size and the ancient dignity of London, Mrs. Albright says:

"There are so many Londons in one London, where begin with them? The London of Roman and Saxon, of Norman and Plantagenet; the London of Chaucer and Shakespeare, of Lamb and Dickens and Thackeray, the London of clubs and hotels; the London of factories and sweatshops; the London that administers the affairs of empire, and the London that dances and plays cricket. There is the summer London of the tourist; there is social London revelling in May; there is the November London of smoke and fog, busy and inhospitable; there is today a darkened London, somewhat apprehensive, but grimly determined, a London different from any we have known."

"Putting aside all unproven traditions, its history begins with the coming of the Roman legions. Rome, seven centuries old, was in her pagan prime; but Paris, then Lutetia, was an island hamlet in the Seine; Vienna was a small Roman camp; Berlin did not come into existence for many a century thereafter; Madrid first appears 1,000 years later; Brussels was founded in the 6th century, Amsterdam about the 13th of our era. These count not at all in London's age."

"The city of London, the commercial heart of the metropolis on the site of the British hamlet and Roman town, measures about a mile square. In the daytime its inhabitants number more than 300,000; at night not a twelfth that number sleep there—land is too valuable for residence. During one day a million and a half of people pass through its gates. Beyond it and across the river spreads another London, of 3,000,000 people, over 130 square miles, and beyond that 'Greater London,' the district covered by the Metropolitan and city police, with 700 square miles and more than 7,000,000 inhabitants."

"Her streets, straightened and laid out to end, would reach from New York to San Francisco. Of her 650,000 buildings, 500 are hotels and inns. One hundred thousand Americans pass through them in peaceful summers and 15,000 resided there before the war. The East End, beyond the 'city' and the Tower, is a manufacturing district, tenanted largely by Jewish tailors. There are other industries, but the race predominates."

The West End is the home of fashion and power. Between these ends lies real London, with all its wealth of long tedious history, of literary and legal repute, of commercial prestige, of architectural fame."

"The distance across the water concerns the American visitor only in a few definite interests; all of London for him lies in a mile-wide band along the Thames, from the Tower to Westminster; but so rich is it that when he would summarize his impressions, he finds neither beginning nor end."

"The whole Christian history speaks to one in a hum of the monster city, the writer says, and its thousands of possessions hallowed by memories. From the Tower, in turn palace, prison, arsenal, to the world-famous Abbey, made sacred to civilization by the illustrious dead gathered within its walls, Mrs. Albright finds the echoes of the past nowhere more rich or more impressive than in the imperial city of earth's greatest empire. Of this echo from the past, to be heard in London, Mrs. Albright says:

"It is the tramp of Roman legions investing a squalid British hamlet; it is the battle-cry of Saxon and Dane; it is the shout of the Norman conqueror, the echoes of the mallets of his builders; it is the gay songs of the courtiers riding to this or that palace on the Thames; it is the chant of many psalms, the sob of martyrs; it is the thud of oars in muffled rowlocks, as a barge slips down the river from the judgment hall of Westminster to the Traitor's Gate at the Tower. It is the laughter of masques and revels in mans of court halls and gardens; it is the moan when a king dies by Whitehall; it is the frenzy born of plague and fire; it is the babble and yells of roisterers, the grove of mists; it is the realm of a new prince and a new crown. It is all these and more—it is the throbbing of a city's heart; it is the voice of many peoples through two thousand years."

Irrepressible Children Often Need Kick-apoo Worm Killer.

There is a reason for the disagreeable and fretful nature of many children. Think of the unrest when the child's body is possessed by tiny worms sapping its vitality and enfeebling its functions. Whatever may be the cause, "that children have worms is a fact." Your child's peevishness and irritability have a cause. Give Kickapoo Worm Killer a chance and if worms are there this humanly harmless remedy will eliminate the annoying parasites. 25c a box.

On the average farm a flock of 100 to 150 hens is more easily made profitable than one of a thousand.

No permanent system of agriculture has yet been devised which did not include live stock, and agriculture is the basis of our bank accounts. Upon it rests the commerce which feeds and clothes the world, the transportation which distributes where needed and the banking systems which pay the bills. The prosperity of the farmer is the prosperity of the world, and live stock is its carburetor.—L. D. Graham.

TANTRUMS

Does your child ever terrify you by holding its breath? If so, how do you meet the emergency? Do you proceed to get hysterical as the child or do you reason the thing to its logical conclusion and realize that this is the one time above all others for mother or father or whoever is dealing with the child to exercise all possible self-control? Hysteria in a child requires practically the same treatment that is called for by hysteria in an adult. It is a time for firmness, for seemingly brutal sternness, and not for that mistaken gentleness or distressed concern which only adds to the child's nervousness. The tendency to hysteria can and should be broken. No child should be allowed to scream itself sick or to hold its breath in stubborn resistance to parental authority.

Two cases in point come to mind. A young hopeful, taken by his mother to a throat specialist, objected strenuously to the examination. He yelled lustily and kicked vigorously while the mother and the family physician tried in vain to hold him still. After wasting considerable time and receiving several kicks, the specialist decided to take a hand in disciplining the youngster. Without warning, for surprise is an important element in the successful treatment of hysteria—he discharged a syringe full of cold water squarely in the face of the child. The boy gasped, his yelling and struggling ceased as by magic, and the examination proceeded in peace, the boy obeying instructions like a little soldier and with more cheerfulness.

A physician-father, going home to dinner one evening, found his ten months old daughter resisting all effort to put her to sleep. The young mother was frantic over the child's insistent holding of its breath, following uncontrollable screaming. Against the mother's protests the father sent her from the room. He protected the ten months' old baby with the folded blanket used as a cover and then and there Miss Baby got her first spanking. The desired result was achieved with one or two slaps, accompanied by a stern command to behave and go to sleep. In sheer surprise, her attention distracted by the spanking, she obeyed.

If your child screams and refuses to sleep, first make sure there are no pins tearing the tender flesh, no tight bands cutting it. Assured that there is no physical cause for the screaming, make the child stop. A spanking wisely administered or a dash of cold water in the face will generally prove effective but be sure that you have yourself well in hand when you go about it. It is treatment, not punishment.

Complexion Blemish?

Yes, that sluggish liver often is the cause of it. Dr. King's New Life Pills clears the complexion, throws off impurities and releases bile naturally and easily. Unless the bowels move freely and regularly all the power in the world will not permanently cover "that muddy complexion." This laxative is mild yet effective. It does not gripe or sicken in its effects. You will not dispute the merits of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Start a treatment today. 25c.

The appearance of vegetables is the most important single factor affecting their sale. They should be clean, fresh and properly graded and handled only in clean, bright packages.

Beware of Cheap Substitutes.

In these days of keen competition it is important that the public should see that they get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and not take substitutes sold for the sake of extra profit. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has stood the test and been approved for more than forty years. Obtainable everywhere.

THE SUBMARINE'S WIRELESS.

A system of wireless which does not require a permanent aerial and which can be set up or dismantled in a few minutes is being used by submarines in the European war. This Funken-Telegraph, as the Germans call it, is operated by means of a small captive balloon from which the transmitting wire descends to a short pole near the instrument. When the message leaves the instrument it goes to the pole and is attracted from there to the balloon by means of a magnet which in turn transmits it to another installation by means of sparks or Funken. This system is effective within a range of six hundred miles. The American Boy.

For Indigestion.

Never take pepsin and preparations containing pepsin or other digestive ferments for indigestion, as the more you take the more you will have to take. What you need is a tonic like Chamberlain's Tablets that will enable the stomach to perform its functions naturally. Obtainable everywhere.

ALL MOURNED TOGETHER.

Death, that grim leveler of all rank, that still-voiced dispeller of hatreds and war-anger, joined, in the common bonds of sympathy and sorrow, all the military representatives of the world's warring powers at the funeral of an American Marine, Private William R. McComb, held at Pekin, China, recently.

McComb, a member of the United States Marine Corps Guard at the American Legation here, died after a brief illness and was buried in Plot No. 94, British Cemetery, while Austrian, Japanese, British, French, Russian, German and Italian soldiers rubbed shoulders at the funeral and gave vent to the common sorrow. What matter if the whole world was at war? Their world—the Pekin military world—was in mourning for "Bill" McComb, the American Marine. And so they wept, silently and unashamed, these stern warriors, as reverently and sadly they placed the floral tributes on the coffin, and formed in columns of squads behind the caisson on which the body was borne to its temporary resting place. The funeral ceremonies ended, they returned to their various legations to become enemies once more. But, for one brief moment, all the world had been at peace so far as military Pekin knew or cared.

The remains of Private McComb will be disinterred in time and shipped to the United States for burial. A brother, Robert T. McComb, 4424 N. Hamlin Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, survives.

Colds Do Not Leave Willingly

Because a cold is stubborn is no reason why you should be. Instead of "wearing" it out, get sure relief by taking Dr. King's New Discovery. Dangerous bronchial and lung ailments often follow a cold which has been neglected at the beginning. As your body faithfully battles those cold germs, no better aid can be given than the use of this remedy. Its merit has been tested by old and young. Get a bottle today. 50 cents and $1.00.

KETTLES AS PONTOONS.

The Greeks use their cooking kettles to construct the strangest of temporary bridges. The soldiers' kettles are piled through the handles of the kettles and lashed in place to form a raft. These rafts are then moved in place across a stream and used to support a temporary bridge. These bridges will bear a very considerable weight.—The American Boy.

How to Prevent Croup.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, O., relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him a dose or two of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.

Quality in vegetables depends upon these factors: The freshness of the vegetables; Growing them in their proper season; A sufficient supply of organic matter, plant food and moisture; Gathering the vegetables at the proper stage of maturity; Giving the vegetables the best cultural conditions; Choosing best flavored varieties.

COMPOSITE CROP FIGURES.

The government reports indicate that the aggregate of the yields of an acre each of wheat, oats, barley and rye in the middle western states was as follows: Wisconsin, 126.5; Illinois, 115; Iowa, 93.5; Indiana, 102; Ohio, 111.5; Nebraska, 86.5; Kansas, 90.6; North Dakota, 101; South Dakota, 110. With the exception of Illinois, where the barley yield was a tie, Wisconsin led all these states on the yield of each of the crops.

To lead each of the states on all four of the principal grain crops, and all of them on each of the crops, except the tie on barley, is a record which characterizes Wisconsin as a grain state without an equal in quantity or quality production.

The Portage county Press, published at Almond, has installed a model "15" linotype, and it was used for setting up a part of last week's paper. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER II—Allison takes Gail riding in his motor car. When he suggests he is entitled to rest on the laurels of his achievements, she asks the disturbing question: "Why?"

CHAPTER III—Gail, returning to her Uncle Jim's home from her drive with Allison, finds cold disapproval in the eyes of Rev. Smith Boyd, who is calling there.

CHAPTER IV—At a boisterous party Gail finds the world uncomfortably full of men, and Allison tells Jim Sargent that his new ambition is to conquer the world.

CHAPTER V—Allison starts a campaign for consolidation and control of the entire transportation system of the world.

CHAPTER VI—Gail becomes popular and Aunt Helen thinks it necessary to advise her as to matrimonial probabilities.

CHAPTER VII—Allison gains control of transcontinental traffic and arranges to absorb the Vedder court tenement property of Market Square church.

CHAPTER VIII—Gail visits Vedder court, and meeting Boyd there, tells him that the cathedral Market Square church proposes to build will be out of profits wrung from equator.

CHAPTER IX—Gail becomes the center of magnetic attraction for the men of her Aunt's social set.

CHAPTER X—At a meeting of the seven financial magnates of the country, Allison organizes the International Transportation company.

CHAPTER XI—Rev. Smith Boyd undertakes Gail's spiritual instruction and Gail unconsciously gives Allison a hint that solves the Vedder court problem for him.

CHAPTER XII—On an inspection trip to Allison's new subway tunnel caves in and imprisons the party, who are rescued by the exertions of Allison and Boyd.

CHAPTER XIII—The newspaper accounts of the subway accident place Gail in the spotlight and drive her to her home in the West. Her friends plot to coax her back.

CHAPTER XIV—Dick Rodley is sent to lure Gail and Arly back to New York, and succeeds.

CHAPTER XVII—Through Allison's connivance with the political boss Vedder court is condemned by the city as unsanitary.

CHAPTER XVIII—Rev. Smith Boyd proposes to the vestry to replace the old Vedder court buildings with model tenements.

CHAPTER XIX—Allison makes arrangements with foreign representatives for the consolidation of the transportation interests of the world.

CHAPTER XX.

The World at Gail's Feet.

Callers for Mrs. Helen Davies, and a huge bouquet of American beauties for Gail. Into the Louis XIV room, where Nicholas Van Ploon and Miss Van Ploon sat with unusual impressiveness, Mrs. Davies came arrayed in the black velvet afternoon gown which gave her more stateliness and more impressive dignity than anything in her wardrobe. Miss Van Ploon, who was a true member of the family, in that she considered the Van Ploon family before any individual, quite approved of Mrs. Davies, and was in no wise jealous of being so distinctly outshone in personal appearance. Nicholas Van Ploon also surveyed Mrs. Davies with a calculating eye, and bobbed his round head slightly to himself. He had canvassed Mrs. Helen Davies before, and had discussed her in family council, but this was a final view, a dress parade as it were.

Half an hour later Mrs. Helen Davies, leaving her guests in the Louis XIV room, paused at the head of the stairs to calm herself. The Mrs. Waverly-Gaites' annual faded into dim obscurity. Mrs. Waverly-Gaites would beg Gail on her bended knees to attend the annual, and Mrs. Helen Davies could attend if she liked. She went into her own room, and took a drink of water, and sat down for thirty or forty seconds; then she went into Gail's suite, where she found that young lady, all unconscious of the honor which was about to befall her, reading a six-hundred-page critique of Chopin's music, and calmly munching chocolates out of a basket decorated with eight shades of silk roses.

"Sit down and have a chocolate, Aunt Helen," hospitably offered Gail, slipping a marker in her book.

Mrs. Davies consumed a great deal of time in selecting a chocolate, but she did not sit down.

"Shall you be at liberty this evening, Gail?" she inquired, with much carelessness.

"Why?" and Gail, whose feet were stretched out and crossed, in lazy ease, looked up at her aunt sideways from under her curving lashes.

Mrs. Davies hesitated a moment. "Houston Van Ploon would like to call."

"Are they still downstairs?" Gail suddenly unvelled her eyes, and brought her slippers squarely in front of her. Also she snatched up a right.

"Yes," and Mrs. Davies betrayed signs of nervousness.

"Are they making the appointment for Houston?"

"Yes," The word drawled.

"Why?" and Gail's brown eyes began to crackle.

Mrs. Davies thought it better to sit down.

"My dear, a great honor has come to you."

Gail leaned forward towards her aunt, and tilted her chin.

"Houston wants to propose, and he's sent his father and sister to find out if he may!" she charged.

"Yes," acknowledged Mrs. Davies, driven past the possibility of delay or preparation, and feeling herself unjustly on the defensive.

"I shall not be at home this evening," announced Gail decisively, and stretched out her feet again, and crossed her little gray slippers, and took a chocolate. "Or any other evening," she added.

Mrs. Davies lost her flutter immediately. This was too stupendously serious a matter to be weakly treated.

"My dear, you don't understand!" she protested, not in anger, but in patient reason. "Houston Van Ploon has been the unattainable match of New York. He is a gentleman in every particular, a desirable young man in every respect, and gifted with everything a young girl would want. He has so much money that you could buy a kingdom and be a queen, if you chose to amuse yourself that way. He has a dignified old family, which makes mere social position seem like an ignominious scramble for cotillion favors; and it is universally admitted that he is the most perfect of all the Van Ploons for many generations. Not exceptionally clever; but that is one of the reasons the Van Ploons are so particular to find a suitable matrimonial alliance for him."

Gail, nibbling daintily at her chocolate, closed her eyelids for a second, the long, brown lashes curved down on her cheeks, and from beneath them there escaped a sparkle like the snap of live coals, while the corners of her lips twitched in that little smile which she kept for her own enjoyment.

"You cannot appreciate the compliment which has been paid you, Gail. Every debutante for the past five years has been most carefully considered by the Van Ploons, and I sincerely believe this to be the first time they have unanimously agreed on a choice. It is a matter of eugenics, Gail, but in addition to that, Mr. Van Ploon assures me that Houston is most fervently interested."

"How careless of them," criticized Gail. "They have neither asked for my measurements nor examined my teeth."

"Gail!" Her chaperon and sponsor was both shocked and stern.

"I positively decline to even discuss the Van Ploon eugenics," stated Gail, pushing aside her chocolates, while a red spot began to appear on her cheeks. "I shall not, as I stated before, be at home to Houston Van Ploon this evening—or any other evening."

"I shall not deliver that message," announced Mrs. Davies, setting her lips. "As your present sponsor, I shall insist that you take more time to consider a matter so important."

"I shall insist on refusing to consider it for one second," returned Gail quietly. "I am very fond of Houston Van Ploon, and I hope to remain so, but I wouldn't marry him under any circumstances. This is firm, flat, and final."

Mrs. Helen Davies dropped patient reason instantly. She was aware of an impulsive wish that Gail were in pinafores, and her own child, so she could box her ears.

"Gail, you compel me to lose my patience!" she declared. "When you came, I strained every influence I possessed to have you meet the most desirable eligibles this big city could offer, just as if you were my own daughter! I have succeeded in working miracles! I have given you an opportunity to interest the very best! You have interested them, but I have never seen such extravagance in the waste of opportunities! You have refused men whom thousands in the highest circles have sought; and now you refuse the very choice of them all! What or whom do you want?"

Gail's red spots were deepening, but she only clasped her knee in her interlocked fingers, her brown hair waving about her face, and her chin uptilted.

"You can't always expect to retain your youth, and beauty and charm!" went on her Aunt Helen. "You can't expect to come to New York every year and look over the eligibles until you find one to suit your fastidious taste! You're capricious, you're ungrateful, and you're unsatisfactory!"

Gail's eyes turned suddenly moist, and the red flashed out of her cheeks.

"Oh, Aunt Helen!" she exclaimed in instant contrition. "I'm so very, very sorry that I am such a disappointment to you! But I just can't marry Mr. Van Ploon. I can't, can I? Don't you see?"

She was up now and down again, sitting on a hassock in front of Mrs. Davies, and the face which she upturned had in it so much of beautiful appeal that even her chaperon and sponsor was softened. "I was nasty a while ago, and I had no excuse for it, for you have been loving and sincere in your desire to make my future happy. I'm so very, very sorry! I'll tell you what I'll do! You may go down and tell Mr. Van Ploon and his daughter that I will see Houston this evening," and then she smiled; "but you mustn't say, 'with pleasure.'"

The soft air which blew upon Gail's cheek was like the first breath of spring, and there was the far-off prophecy of awakening in the very sunshine, as she sped out the river road with Allison in his powerful runabout.

"It's glorious!" exclaimed Gail, her cheeks answering to the caress of the air with a flush of blossomlike delicacy. She was particularly contented today. Allison had been so busy of late, and she had missed him. With all his strength, he was restful.

"I feel like a new man at this time of the year," returned Allison, glancing at Gail with cool appreciation. A car full of men passed them, and the looks they cast in his runabout pleased him. "Gail, do you remember the first time we drove out here?"

"Indeed yes," she laughed. "With the snow in our eyes, and the roads all white, with the lights gleaming through the flakes like arctic will-o'-the-wisps. We ran away that night, and dined at Roseleaf inn, and worried the folks to death, for fear we had had an accident."

"I had more than an accident that night," said Allison. "I had a total wreck."

Gail glanced at him quickly, but his face was clear of any apparent purpose.

Calmly Munching Chocolates.

pose. He was gazing straight ahead, his clean-cut profile, always a pleasant thing to look upon, set against the shifting background of rocky banks as if it were the one steadfast and unalterable thing in the universe; and he was smiling introspectively.

"It was about here that it happened," he went on. "I think I'd been bragging a little, and I think you meant to slyly prick my balloon, which I will admit seemed a kind and charitable thing to do."

"What was it?" wondered Gail, trying to recall that unimportant conversation.

"Oh, a gentle intimation that I hadn't done so much," he laughed. "I had just finished consolidating all the traction cars in New York, subways, L's, and surface; and I felt cocky about it. I even remarked that I had achieved the dream of my life, and intended to rest a while. All you said was, 'Why?' and his laugh pealed out."

"I used to be conspicuous for impertinence," smiled Gail. "I'm trying to reform."

"I'm glad you hadn't started when I met you," returned Allison, steering around a sharp stone with the firm accuracy which Gail had so often admired. "I never had so stinging a reproof as that little why. It did me more good than any sermon I ever heard."

Gail looked at him in questioning perplexity. She could not gather what he meant, but she had a sense of something big, and once more she was impressed with the tremendous reserve force in the man. His clear gray eyes were fixed on the road ahead, and the very symbol of him seemed to be this driving, top speed, a long road, a steady hand, a cool determination, a sublime disregard of hills and valleys which made them all a level road.

"Why? That word set me out on a new principle that never, while I had strength in me, would I consider my work finished, no matter how great an achievement I had made. I am still at work."

Something within her leaped up in answer to the thrill of exaltation in his voice. To have been the inspiration of great deeds, even by so simple an agency as the accidental use of a word, was in itself an exalting thing, though an humbling one, too. And there were great deeds. She was sure of that as she looked at him.

"When I was a boy I lived on ancient history," he went on, with a smile for the bygone dreamer he had been. "I wanted to be a soldier, a great general, a warrior, in the sturdy old sense, and my one hero was Alexander the Great, because he conquered the world! That's what I wanted to do. When I grew older, and found how small was the world which Alexander had conquered, not much bigger than the original thirteen states, I grew rather disillusioned, particularly as I was working at about that time for a dollar and a quarter a day. I spent a few busy years, and had forgotten the dream; then you said 'why' and it all came back."

"Hurry!" commanded Gail. "Curiosity is bad for me."

"Let me build it up, step by step, for you. Incidentally, I'll give you some confidential news which you will be reading in months to come. I hope," and he laughed, "that you will not tell your friends the reporters about it."

"Cross my heart, I won't," she gaily replied. The sting of her one big newspaper experience had begun to die away.

"When you asked me why, I was trying to secure Vedder court for a terminal station for my city traction lines. Vedder court quickly became, in my imagination, the terminal point not only of the city traction lines, but of the world's transportation. From that I would run a railroad tube to the mainland, so that I could land passengers, not only in the heart of New York, but at the platforms of every street car and L and subway train."

"How wonderful!" exclaimed Gail, in enthusiasm. This was an idea she could grasp. "And have you secured Vedder court?"

"It's a matter of days," he returned carelessly. "The next step was the transcontinental line. I built it up, piece by piece, and today, under my own personal control, with sufficient stock to elect my own directors, who will jump when I crack the whip, I possess a railroad line from the Atlantic to the Pacific so direct, so straight, and so allied with ninety-five per cent of the freight interests of the United States that, within two years, there will not be a car wheel turning in America which does not do so at the command of the A-P. railroad. That is the first step leading out of Vedder court. The news of that consolidation will be in tomorrow morning's papers, and from that minute on, the water will begin to drip from railroad stocks."

"How about Uncle Jim's road?" Gail suddenly interrupted.

"I am taking care of him," he told her easily. "From Vedder court run subways along the docks."

"I see!" interrupted Gail. "You have secured control of the steamship companies, of the foreign railroads, of everything which hauls and carries!"

"Alas! Alas!" he laughingly informed her.

She was silent now, and he left her silent, brooding, himself, upon the vast scope of his dreaming, and planning still to center more and more the fruits of that dreaming within his own eager hand.

Roseleaf inn. Gail recognized it with a smile as they turned in at the drive. She was glad that they had come here, for it was linked in her mind with the beginnings of that great project of which she had been the impulse, and in which the thing in her that had been denied opportunity because she was a woman, claimed a hungry share.

At his suggestion—it was more like a command, but she scarcely noticed—she telephoned that she was going to remain to dinner with Allison; and then they enjoyed a two-hour chat of many things, trivial in themselves, but fraught now with delightful meaning, because they had to think on so many unexpressed things, larger than these idle people about them could conceive, or grasp if they knew.

Homeward again in the starlit night, still in that whirl of exaltation. It was somewhat chillier now, and Allison bundled her into the machine with rough tenderness. She felt the thrill of him as he sat beside her, and the firm strength with which he controlled the swiftly speeding runabout, was part her strength. They were kindred spirits, these two, soaring above the affairs of earth in the serene complacency of those who make trifles of vastness itself. They did not talk much, for they had not much to talk about. The details of a scheme so comprehensive as Allison's were not things to be explained, they were things to be seen in a vision. Once she asked him about the bringing of the foreign railroads into the combination, and he told her that this would only be accomplished by a political upheaval, which would take place next month, and would probably involve the whole of Europe. It was another detail; and it seemed quite natural, she so interested that he told her all about his foreign visitors.

In the park, Allison stopped at the little outlook house where they had climbed on that snowy night, and they stood there, with the stars above, the trees below, and the twinkling lights stretching out to the horizon, all alone above the world of civilization. Below sounded the clang of street cars, and far off to the left, high in the air, there gleamed the lights of a curving L train. That was a part of Allison's world which he had long since conquered, a part which he already held in the hollow of his hand; and the fact that every moving thing which clung upon a track in all this vast panorama was under his dominion, served only to illustrate and make plain the marvel of the accomplishment which was now under way. Beyond that dim horizon lay another and still another, and in them all, wherever things moved or were transported, the lift of Allison's finger was to start and stop the wheels, to the uttermost confines of the earth! Oh, it was wonderful; wonderful! And she was part of it!

It was there that he proposed to her. It did not surprise her. She had known it when they had entered the park, and that this was the place.

He told her that all this empire was being bulldozed to lay at her feet, that she was the empress of it and he the emperor, but that their joy was to be not in the sway, not in the scepter and crown, but in the doing, and in the having done, and in the conceiving and having conceived.

Was this a cold painting of pomp and glory and advantage and reward? He added to it the fire of a lover, and to that the force and mastery and compulsion of his dynamic power. She felt again the potent thrill of him, and the might and sweep and drive of him, and with the hot, tumbling words of love in her ears, and her senses a-reel, and her mind in its whirling exaltation, she felt between them a sympathy and a union which it was not in human strength to deny! Something held her back, something made her withhold the word of promise, on the plea that she must have more time to think, to consider, to straighten out the tangle of her mind; but she suffered him to sweep her in his arms, and rain hot kisses upon her face, and to tell her, over and over and over and over, that she belonged to him, forever and forever!

Plain felt hats, untrimmed, are worn for sports. They are made in bright yellow, green, blue and pink and also in white.

Contrasting things in coats for day and evening wear are usual. Often figures are used for the linings, and some smart coats are lined with two colored checked silk.

Sleeves on some of the new evening frocks are no more than little ruffles, sometimes of tulle edged with beads and sometimes held out with a flexible wire at the lower edge.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

When a crop makes very good profits there is danger of growing too much, thus inviting disease and insect enemies that may be troublesome to combat. Diversified gardening is the best plan for most producers. This makes it possible to rotate, which is an advantage from a good many standpoints.

Feed the soil if you wish to have the soil feed you, applies forcibly to wormout lands.

Good fruit can be raised only with care and attention given to spraying, pruning and generally good care.

The best compost heap is the manure of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and fowls. All such should be saved.

Perennial flowering plants are satisfactory because they grow in the same place for years without much attention.

Know what you must spray for, then do the work right. Don't expect any one spray material to be a universal remedy.

Plover or spade up the poultry runs that are not occupied and sow to rye or a mixture of rye and clover. This will furnish green stuff for winter and at the same time disinfect the soil.

NORMAL SCHOOL NEWS

Weekly Resume of What is Going on at the City's Biggest Educational Center.

Prof. Ames has returned from Minneapolis, where he attended a teachers association meeting.

Members of the Y. W. C. A. gathered at the home of Prof. and Mrs. Jas. E. Delzell on Clark street Saturday evening and enjoyed an informal mixer and social.

Prof. Hyer leaves this week for Des Moines, Ia., where he will attend a teachers meeting and also lecture on the Montessori system of education in connection with the Stevens Point Normal.

The following faculty members will attend the state teachers' convention to be held at Milwaukee this week: Pres. John F. Sims, Profs. Culver, Herrick, Ames, Bowman, the Misses Allen, Whitney, Fianagan, Dunlap and Shroede. Prof. Ames will have supervision of the advancement of the Montessori education system at this meeting.

Prof. Jas. E. Delzell left last night for Omaha, Neb., where he will attend a meeting of the teachers association of that state. He will also represent Stevens Point in that state in the interests of the Montessori course to be given in this city in a few months. Through Mr. Delzell's wide acquaintance in this neighboring state, the Stevens Point Normal will be advertised as well as the principals of Madame Montessori.

The Normal orchestra, under the supervision of Miss Dunlap, entertained the student body with a short program Tuesday morning. At a recent meeting of this organization, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mildred Pierce.
Vice Pres.—Mary Miller.
Sec.—Treas.—Emil Hafsoos.
Sergeant—Frank Wood.
Emil Hafsoos has been elected editor-in-chief of Prof. Fairchild's current events section for the month of November.

State Supt. C. P. Cary has issued a very instructive bulletin on "Lessons on the Use of the School Library." It is the first of the kind ever issued and copies are being distributed in Normal, graded, city and country schools. Two hundred copies have been received by Pres. Sims. The bulletin deals extensively with suggestions which will prove helpful to the student in the library. The object is to help make the school library as effective an agency as possible in the work of the schools and in the lives of those who attend them. These bulletins are also intended for guidance of teachers in giving to their pupils definite lessons along this phase of work.

On Saturday of this week the La Crosse Normal football team comes to this city, where they will clash with Cornelia's team in the last conference game of the season. This game will have an important bearing on the northern division championship, though the winner will not be known for two weeks yet. Should S. P. N. come out victorious in Saturday's contest and La Crosse defeat River Falls, S. P. N. will still have a claim to honors. The team, since their return from Superior, is undergoing a stiff practice every night and Coaches Cornelia, Watson and Fairchild predict a battle royal this week. It is expected that a crowd even larger than witnessed the River Falls game will be present and give the home team their hearty support. The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock. Turn out and boost for S. P. N.

The question for the annual Junior debate between teams representing the Oshkosh and Stevens Point schools, has been submitted by J. A. H. Keith, president of the Oshkosh Normal, and is as follows: "Resolved, That the Principal of State Socialism is Superior to the Principal of State Competition." It now lies with Stevens Point to select the side of the question to uphold. A call will be issued soon by Prof. M. M. Ames, who will have charge of this field of forensic activity, for candidates for this year's Junior team. The tryout will take place in the Normal auditorium just before Thanksgiving vacation and it is expected that upwards of twenty will enter the preliminary contest. Last year our Junior team succeeded in winning unanimously over the Oshkosh debaters and Prof. Ames is out to repeat this victory in this year's contest.

LOCAL HIGHS VICTORS

Stevens Point Team Wins Exciting Contest From Grand Rapids by 7 to 6 Score.

The Stevens Point High school football team clashed with their ancient rivals, Grand Rapids, last Saturday afternoon at the fair grounds and came out on the long end of a 7 to 6 score. In the first half the locals were clearly outplayed, but they came back and succeeded in scoring in the third quarter and kicking goal, thus putting the game "on ice."

The first touchdown was scored by Grand Rapids in the second quarter, when Smith, left tackle, carried the ball five yards for the count, after it had been advanced to that point by end runs and line plunges. Goal was missed, making the score, Grand Rapids 6, Stevens Point 0.

The locals' only touchdown came in the third period after the ball had been advanced to the Grand Rapids ten yard line. Horne scored and Kelsey kicked goal, making the final tally 7 to 6, with the down river boys on the small end.

At the end of the fourth quarter the red and black were only prevented from scoring by lack of time. When the whistle blew the ball was in Stevens Point's possession on Grand Rapids' one yard line.

The locals clearly demonstrated in Saturday's contest that they could "come back." They waded through the visitors in old time form and cinched the game in the third quarter. A large delegation of Grand Rapids rooters came up to witness the contest and made themselves much in evidence by their display of school spirit. Following are the lineups:

Stevens Point—Shumway 1e, Mosey 1t, Bidwell 1g, R. Broton c, Kelsey rg, Longhurst rt, Zorn re, Holman c, Bourn lh, Horne rh, Dobeck f.

Grand Rapids—Dolloway 1e, Smith 1t, Grignon 1g, Deyo c, McGlynn rg, Metzger rt, Stark re, Chamberlain q, McSwain lh, Levine rh, Kluge, f.

Officials—Referee, Atcherson; umpire, Smith; head lineman, Fairchild, timekeeper, Hofsoos.

LAST SATURDAY'S MEETING.

Judging from the complete reports and the spirit and enthusiasm with which they were given at the meeting of the Woman's Club Saturday, it may be said with truth that the delegates to the conventions at La Crosse and Wausau were like the heroine in the story read at La Crosse by Zona Gale: "Each and everyone came home as did Calliope Marsh with a new sense of consecration to the home town and to all living things." The best part of it all was the delegates had the ability to communicate the inspiration they had received to the club members who attended Saturday's meeting.

The delegates, Mrs. J. W. Bird, Mrs. H. A. Hudson, Miss Bessie Allen, Mrs. J. J. Heffron and Mrs. R. W. Fairchild gave reports of the following topics discussed at the conventions: Standardization of music, Political science in reference to the home, Plea for cooperation of the father in the home and for the betterment of the country school and school teacher, How to make the Chautauquas pay, the need of social centers, the necessity of testing for feeble mindedness and the segregation of the feeble minded, the mothers' pension law and child welfare.

Mrs. D. J. Leahy, district vice president, made a comparison between the last convention at La Crosse and others she had attended. One of the features she spoke very favorably of was community singing and suggested that we give it a trial. Mrs. Leahy brought the matter of the district convention to be held here in the spring before the ladies and said that with their cooperation she hoped to make this convention the best one ever held in the eighth district. In closing she made a special plea for the endowment fund, asking our club to be generous when that question comes before them.

Many expressions of appreciation were made by the delegates for the generous hospitality and the many acts of courtesy shown to them while attending the conventions at Wausau and La Crosse.

The musical numbers were rendered by Mr. Eagleburger and Mrs. Hay. Mr. Eagleburger played Schubert's "Serenade" and "The Miserere" from Il Trovatore. Mrs. Hay sang "I Love Thee" and "Du bist wie eine Blume." Both Mr. Eagleburger and Mrs. Hay were heartily encouraged.

During the social hour dainty refreshments were served.

Echoes From the Conventions

"Why should not a music teacher be licensed and required to attain a standard of efficiency, the same as doctors, preachers and other professional workers?"—Miss Elizabeth B. Blinliff of Ripon.

"The educational problem will never be solved. We are constantly groping for something new"—Miss Ellen Sabin.

"Educational reform has become too complex to handle educational bills in the manner they were disposed of by the last legislature."—Mrs. Mary D. Bradford.

"Complete segregation seems to be the only way to meet the problem of the defective child."—Dr. E. Pogue.

"Club women should start to study all the problems with which they have to deal within the confines of their own yard."—Miss A. L. Marlott.

Those who have been reading The Gazette's serial, "The Ball of Fire," will notice that its location in the paper has been changed from part two to part one, where it will hereafter be found. "The Ball of Fire" is without doubt one of the greatest serials ever published, and with each succeeding installment increases in interest. The Gazette is determined to make its story page a real feature, and with that end in view is already planning to contract for a worthy successor to "The Ball of Fire," which, however, will take several weeks yet to run.
